Some individuals think that contesting all the time is beneficial. However, many opine that helping each other brings better outcomes. This essay will discuss both these views and in my opinion, cooperation leads to long-term positive results.

There are several benefits of healthy competition. To begin with, it leads to everyone feeling intrinsically motivated to achieve better things in life. For example, when one friend gets better grades at school, the other peer feels like working hard to get similar or higher marks. Moreover, when human beings are contesting against each other, it pushes them to think out of the box which leads to groundbreaking innovations. Large multinational corporations come up with new and helpful products that solve the problems of their customers better because they want to beat their competitors. Therefore, some amount of rivalry should be encouraged.

However, cooperating with each other can bring fruitful results as well. Firstly, helping others and getting aid from others makes an individual calm and relaxed. It makes them feel supported and not alone in the journey of life. Furthermore, cooperation builds better social relationships with friends, family members and neighbors. These connections are valuable in times of struggle and distress. Hence, one should always focus on assisting fellow beings instead of winning over them.

To conclude, this essay has discussed both the views. After carefully evaluating them, it is clear that cooperation always reaps better results than competition. An individual that focuses on helping others is able to navigate different challenges of life efficiently as he has many people backing him up in times of struggle.
